Mahoning County Children Services Celebrates Child Abuse Prevention Month

By Radhika Cruz

On April 12, 2011, Mahoning County Children Services in collaboration with the Akron Children's Hospital Mahoning Valley Child Advocacy Center will be having its 6th Annual Pinwheels for Prevention event.

Pinwheels for Prevention is a nationwide public awareness campaign created by Prevent Child Abuse America (PCA) to encourage Americans in taking action to prevent abuse and neglect from ever occurring.

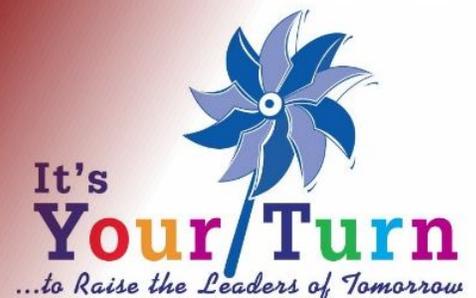

The Pinwheel not only serves as a symbol of a happy childhood, but it also represents "change" due to its constant movement. The prevention message has evolved or "changed" from not only being an awareness message but also includes providing solutions for effective prevention. The goal of the campaign is to stop child abuse before it ever occurs.

In 2010, Mahoning County Children Services received 3,129 calls concerning child safety and of those calls, 1,317 were classified as child abuse or neglect. Each of these reports was provided by adults in our community who advocated for the safety of children. During our Pinwheels for Prevention event, each report will be visually displayed in the form of a pinwheel on the lawn of Akron Children's Hospital which is located at 6505 Market Street in Boardman on April 12th at 9am.

The event agenda will include remarks from Denise Stewart, Executive Director of Mahoning County Children Services and the keynote speaker will be the Honorable Mark A. Belinky, Judge of Mahoning County Probate Court. There will also be a brief reception following the event that will include refreshments and entertainment.

Mahoning County Children Services Recognizes Child Abuse Prevention Month

The month of April has been designated as "Child Abuse Prevention Month" throughout the State of Ohio. The goal of this program is to bring awareness to the community of the importance of preventing child abuse and neglect and to motivate community members to take an active role in the protection of children. In Mahoning County we are pleased to present two major events that emphasize the importance of the community's role in assisting in the prevention of child abuse and neglect. On Tuesday, April 12, our agency will host our annual "Pinwheels for Prevention" event at Akron Children's Hospital, Building C, 6505 Market St., where 1317 pinwheels will be planted on the lawn representing the number of calls of abuse and neglect that were made to our agency.

In addition, our agency, in collaboration with the Family First Council, was selected as one of only 11 counties throughout the state to receive a special grant for the provision of a second Child Abuse Prevention event. On Saturday, April 16, we will host a day long family event to increase awareness of the child abuse and neglect prevention through a variety of workshops and activities. This event will be held at the Davis Center in Mill Creek Park from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m.

It is of importance to note that total reports received by our agency in 2009-- including child abuse, neglect and dependency referrals -- increased approximately 30% from 2007. However, through comprehensive case management, the number of children in placement has not increased, but has actually decreased by approximately 4%. By investing in birth, kinship and adoptive families we have been able to provide family stability, as well as better long term outcomes for children. Educated and involved communities play an integral role in preventing child abuse and neglect and enhance our ability to provide quality services to our children.

To sum up, that is what this month's activities are all about!

Department News This month we are featuring Mahoning County Children Services Group Homes

By Glenna Ress, Residential Supervisor

Mahoning County Children Services group homes are homes to 13 (thirteen) children, ranging in ages from 9 to 18. There are 3 (three) homes; The Girls Child Care Center (GCCC), the Boys Child Care Center (BCCC) and the Receiving Home. The group homes are supervised by one supervisor and 2 group home coordinators, 15 full time Youth Leaders and 18 part time Youth Leaders.

The GCCC currently has 7 (seven) young ladies residing at that home. We are fortunate to have an intern from YSU, Lynn Duffey, who has been providing education and training in the area of health and HIV issue for our residents. Lynn has been working with the girls to prepare them for sharing information in other educational settings.

The BCCC is currently home to 5 (five) young men. The boys have volunteering at a local agency with great success serving the homeless in our community.

The Receiving Home is currently home to 2 boys and 2 girls, ranging from ages 9 to 13. The children have a tutor coming to the home 4 (four) nights a week to help with school work. Two of the children just made the honor roll at their respective schools. Good Job!

We've all heard the old adage, "It's not what you say, but how you say it." Communication is not just the spoken word, but also body language and tone of voice. You can say the nicest words, but if your eyes are cold and there's no smile on your face, the words are meaningless. The opposite is also true. If you need to convey a serious message, you cannot giggle and look away while talking. Make yourself aware of your own body language; this will better enable you to understand other's body language. But keep in mind that somebody languages are simply a person's habit, so be careful when trying to interpret.

Did you know that children generally communicate and receive information through nonverbal communication? Many times a child cannot verbalize what they are thinking or feeling, so they act it out. At times their actions and/or demeanor are the exact opposite of what they are saying. So, pay close attention to what your child is not saying, especially when he or she pulls away from or acts differently around certain people.

"Parents Stress levels and a Vulnerable Population of Children"

Among all types of children who are at risk to suffer abuse and neglect, children with disabilities are an extremely vulnerable part of this population. This is directly correlated with parent stress levels, which are notably higher than for parents of typical children. Behavior challenges with these children have been documented by parents as being one of the most stressful factors. There is new research that has shown that mothers of children with Autism and behavioral problems have stress levels similar to military personnel in combat (Journal of Autism and Developmental Disorders).

Research shows that mothers, who tend to be the primary caregivers, have less time for themselves, are more tired, and are three times more likely to suffer from stressful events on any given day. They are also more interrupted at work and have a difficult time finding caregivers who are qualified to provide care for their child.

Parents need to find ways to ease their stress levels. Here are some parenting tips from special-needs.families.com to aid in dealing with such high levels of stress: Make sure to find a way to take some time for yourself and for your spouse and other children. Schedule a "time off" and stick to it; Take care of your own health; when possible, accept help from people who offer it; Seek support from other moms parenting similar children. There are local support groups and online ones as well.

April is National Autism Awareness Month! Spread awareness of the need for research and funding to aid in finding answers and providing help to families raising children with Autism in your community!

Mahoning Matters

Words that indicate multiple people functioning as one body are collective nouns. Common examples are team, family, crowd, unit, general public, platoon, couple, and Congress. The key to proper constructions with such words is remembering that collective nouns are singular in number. Therefore, the corresponding pronoun that often follows a collective noun in a sentence must also be singular (NOT plural).

Incorrect usage example: The crowd expressed their displeasure with the referee's call.

Correct usage example: The crowd expressed its displeasure with the referee's call.

Incorrect usage example: Congress must get their act together if America is to prosper.

Correct usage example: Congress must get its act together if America is to prosper.

Incorrect usage example: The unit pooled their money together to buy a pizza.

Correct usage example: The unit pooled its money together to buy a pizza.

By the way, there is no such word as its' (which is a non-standard form). The only two correct forms are it's (which is a contraction for "it is" and, less commonly, "it has") and its (which is the third person singular possessive pronoun used in the example sentences above).

Healthy Eating For a Healthy Mind

Millions of children have been diagnosed with Autism or ADHD and recent research proves that there is often a connection between the food children eat and their brain function. Much of the research indicates testing for food allergies, sensitivities and intolerances would be a step towards determining if a change of diet would help these children improve their brain function..

The Autism Research Institute posted these results on one of the studies conducted in a "Parent Recorded Response" study:

- 50% of children with autism improved by avoiding milk
- 49% improved by avoidance of wheat
- 64% improved on gluten-casein free diet

The researchers have found that a high percentage of these children are unable to properly break down certain proteins. The two main offenders seem to be gluten (the protein in wheat, oats, rye and barley) and casein (milk protein). These proteins leak into the child's gut undigested and attach to the opiate receptors of the autistic brain. Johnson and Johnson Ortho Clinical Diagnostics researchers confirmed peptides (breakdown products of proteins) with opiate activity in the urine of a high percentage of autistic children and have found elimination diets have made improvements in their functioning.

SpankOut Day USA

By Radhika Cruz

SpankOut Day USA was initiated in 1998 to raise awareness to the need to end corporal punishment of all children and to promote non-violent ways to teach children positive behaviors. This nationwide initiative is observed on April 30th of each year and is sponsored by an organization called End Physical Punishment of Children (EPOCH-USA), a program of the Center for Effective Discipline. On this date, all parents, guardians and caregivers are asked to refrain from physically spanking their children and seek other positive forms of discipline through educational programs in their community.

Non-physical forms of discipline include: natural consequences, re-direction, distraction, establishing clear rules, loss of privileges and setting limits to name a few. Discipline involves being proactive in teaching children desirable behaviors before an inappropriate behavior occurs. Should misbehavior occur, positive discipline will correct the misbehavior quickly in an environment of respect, love and caregiver self-control rather than an environment of anger, fear and a caregiver's loss of control.

Let's join together in this mission of "Raising Responsible Kids Without Hitting".

For more information on positive discipline techniques or for additional ideas on how you can do something to stop children from being physically disciplined, please visit
